A description of the affordance. Make sure you include where it is on campus.

Affordance is an object that basically makes it clear how you are supposed to use it. I think a good object to talk about is the chairs in the polytechnic library.

How/why it works/does not work.

It works by bringing a great place for group projects, and a quiet place. Sometimes it doesn't work when only one person takes the whole chair making it so groups can't use them. The side tables might also deter people from sitting there if there is a group present to make it less "awkward" or a group may not go because someone sitting there

What type of affordance it represents (cognitive, physical, etc.)

The chairs have perpetual affordance that being it's pretty easy to see how others are using it, and social affordance for collaboration and thinking.

What you would do to fix it, if it doesn't work.

I would get rid of the side chair and make the chairs more curved.

Take a picture of it and add it to your submission.
